A dedication to peace.

Remember...
Recognition of athletic excellence.

Over the last 12 years Juniata College has been transformed. The period of Bob Neff's leadership has been one of significant accomplishment.

Accomplishments have included gaining national and international recognition of Juniata College by:

- Achieving identification of Juniata College as a Carnegie I Institution (Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching), placing Juniata in the company of the top liberal arts colleges and universities in the nation;
- Establishing the United Nations Seminars for Arms Control and Disarmament at the Williamsburg Conference facility;
- Hosting the 1993 Division III Women's Volleyball Championship;
- Bringing the world class Icon exhibit to the college in 1988;
- Transforming Carnegie Hall into the Juniata College Museum of Art, making it one of the region's finest showplaces for fine art.

The accomplishments include strengthening the financial base of Juniata College by:

- More than quadrupling the endowment from 1986 to 1998;
- More than tripling contributions to the annual fund from 1986 to 1998;
- Exceeding $1 million in the Annual Fund for the first time in 1996;
- Completing the Transformations Campaign which secured gifts and commitments of $37 million;
- Returning the college to a position of fiscal strength without mortgaging the college's future;
- Creating a climate for institutionally integrated marketing designed to empower each member of the college community to assume a role in advancing the goals of the institution.

The accomplishments include enhancing the physical plant and academic qualities of Juniata College by:

- Creating a master plan for the campus;
- Enhancing campus technology, including classroom applications, residence hall access, administrative systems and distance learning;
- Refurbishing Sherwood, Sunderland, Cloister, South, Tussey and Terrace student residence halls;
- Establishing the new William E. Swigart Jr. Enrollment Center, housing admission, student financial planning and all student recruiting activities;
- Expanding international program opportunities and building a diverse student body with broad international representation;
- Completing the Kennedy Sports+Recreation Center project, Knox Stadium, Oller Track, and the Raffensberger Tennis Courts;
- Completing the F. Samuel Brumbaugh and Martha A. Brumbaugh Strength and Fitness Center as an added dimension to co-curricular offerings at the College;
- Constructing the Elizabeth Evans Baker Peace Chapel, designed by noted architect Maya Lin.

Faculty members in the Economics & Business Administration Department and 5 other Brethren related institutions in the U.S. and Japan holds the 1st conference on international education opportunities for students in business administration and economics.

The accomplishments include strengthening the bond between Juniata College and the region in which it is located by:

- Establishing the Program for Area Residents (PAR), which provided the region's non-traditional students access to Juniata's high quality education at a reduced cost;
- Enhancing science teaching and learning in the region's secondary schools through the Science in Motion Project;
- Bringing to Huntingdon the DuBois Business College, which expanded educational opportunities for the citizens of the Huntingdon region;
- Opening the campus as a cultural center for the people of Huntingdon County by welcoming them to join the college community at Artist Series events, academic lectures, art exhibits, student recitals, and athletic events;
- Entering into an agreement with the Westminster Woods retirement community, opening the campus to its residents; and
- Working with the local banking community to establish a $5.5 million loan pool to advance economic development in the region.

"I had stopped believing that there were genuine, kind people left. Then I met you both (Dr. Neff and wife, Dottie). First I was so surprised that the President of this institution knew my name and what I was involved in. Through the choir activities with you and speaking with you at different campus events, I have realized there still are magnificent people in this world, and they are there when you need them the most. Thank you."

—A member of the Class of 2000

"I believe my best year of management was my tenth year," Dr. Neff noted. "We accomplished more with scarce resources than any other year. We concluded a campaign when we were cutting budgets and for this I have to commend the staff. Our best year together was when our expectations were not high, and yet we achieved more."

"My easiest year of management and the one for which I have the greatest gratitude is my last year. Everything came together, even in this time of transition."

Among the greatest achievements of his presidency, Dr. Neff includes the successful completion of the Transformations Campaign. "That we would hit $37 million when we were advised that we should only shoot for $20 million was an extraordinary accomplishment."

"The management system that we currently have in place where student services and academic life are integrated, as are the marketing functions of enrollment and development, is something that many institutions would like to have but, for a variety of reasons, can't bring about. I am grateful to Bob Hatala and Jim Lakso for making it work on the student life side, and to Don Moyer who really made it work on the development and enrollment side. We have established at Juniata a model for the way a college ought to be managed."

In conclusion, Bob Neff spoke of his own growth as a leader. "I have come to understand leadership as a spiritual journey. The challenge is that while you may initially think you need to do it all, but in the long run it all comes as a gift to you. It is beyond anything you can imagine. Where the institution is now is so far beyond what I could have ever dreamed. So much of that has happened in the last five years. My overall view is one of great gratitude to the people who relate to this institution. What I have seen in the end is that these twelve years have been a great gift that everyone shares."

Students Salute Dr. Neff

Freshman picnic at the president's home.

If first impressions are lasting, Robert W. Neff made his mark early on with Juniata students during his 12-year tenure as president of Juniata College. Even before their first class as freshmen, all the new Juniata students were welcomed to the college by Dr. Neff, who annually held a freshman picnic for all the new students at his home before the start of classes in the fall semester.

Such a welcoming from a college president is not common, and it establishes a feeling with the students that the door to his office will always be open for them.

"That event sort of set the tone for the next four years at Juniata," Bill Rys '96 said. "Dr. Neff was always accessible to everyone, and he let that be known. He also has a knack to remember people and their names, and if he saw someone walking across campus he'd always call out their name and say hello. That makes students feel a sense of belonging when the president calls you out by name. That's the kind of relationship that he wanted students to have with him. He always had an open-door policy, which was reassuring to students to know that they could relate like that with the president of the college."

Rys remembered the effects of that open-door policy in one case in particular. Living in South Hall during the 1994-95 school year, he was a resident there when the dormitory caught fire. All students were evacuated and temporarily relocated to Tussey and Terrace halls.

"It was a very uncomfortable situation living under those makeshift arrangements, and we didn't know how long we would be forced to live under those conditions," Rys recalled. "The R.A. from South Hall called Dr. Neff to inquire about the situation, and he personally came over to talk with us. He assured us that he would have us back in South Hall as soon as possible and not long after that we were back in our rooms. We moved much earlier than had been speculated, because of the actions he took. It was just so nice that he made the effort to give his personal touch, which was so indicative of him."

Dr. Neff stepped to the forefront of many other student-related issues during his presidency at Juniata. While he was a member of the Student Government Board, Chris Bush '92 got a firsthand account of a number of those issues.

"There were several hotly-debated issues on campus, and Dr. Neff always stepped up and answered the call of students," Bush said.

"Whatever the issue, he responded to students' questions and concerns. In general, he was someone who was there for students. He took an interest in students, and he took a genuine interest in making sure that students got the most out of their Juniata experience – academically, culturally, and socially."

Not that students always agreed with the final decisions that were made. Many, in fact, opposed the change in the school mascot from "Indians" to "Eagles." There was also a hotly-debated issue concerning the college's policy of reporting crimes on campus.

"The underlying issue was whether the allegiance of the college administration was with students or with putting the college in the best light possible when it came to its crime report," Bush said. "We held a town-hall forum with students and administrators, which led to some heated exchanges. Dr. Neff sat right up front and answered some very emotional questions of students, and his genuine care for students was evident.

"We held a number of town-hall forums, and Dr. Neff was always helpful in attending those meetings and answering the questions posed to him," Bush said.

Dr. Neff could not receive a higher compliment from a Juniata than when Bush said, "Not being a Juniata graduate himself, he exemplifies the qualities of Juniata. He is interested in well-rounded liberal arts qualities, and he believes in being very personable."

Farewell From The Faculty

Donald J. Mitchell
Professor of Chemistry
Director for the Mobile
Science Outreach Project

"Shortly after Bob Neff became president, Kevin McCullen (former associate vice president for college advancement) and I went to him with our first National Science Foundation grant proposal for Science Outreach. Kevin explained that the proposal included Juniata College raising $300,000 from foundations and corporations. Bob Neff's only comment about the program as he took it to sign was, "This is the right thing to do". This attitude of 'doing the right thing' is seen in other areas of Bob Neff's tenure. Juniata College is a much stronger institution because we had a president who was determined to do 'the right thing'."

Wilfred G. Norris
William I. & Zella B. Book
Professor of Physics
Chair, Physics Department

"Bob did a nice balancing act during his presidency to set the stage for strengthening of the humanities while maintaining strength of the sciences. I'm particularly gratified that we are able to continue with a strong physics department. Bob put together an impressive administrative team which has had a good effect on the college."

Jill B. Keeney
Assistant Professor of Biology

"I have been constantly encouraged by Bob's support of families. Being an assistant professor and the mother of two children can be awfully tiring at times! From the time I arrived on campus, whenever I ran into Bob, he always asked how the family was doing, and how I was doing in the task of balancing career and family. He believes firmly in, and lives by example, the importance of family; it has been great to have his support."

Diane M. Bargiel
Assistant Professor of Music
Director of Artist Series

"Without Dr. Neff's support, we wouldn't have had the capability to perform at the level that we've performed the last few years. He strengthened the college's commitment to music and the arts."

J. Jackson Barlow
Associate Professor of
Political Science
Chair, Politics Department

"He leaves with the college stronger than it was when he arrived. The strength of the college is reflected in many ways, but one of the most important ways is evident in our students and the types of scholarships they are earning now. Just in the last few years we have had Fulbright Scholars and our first Goldwater Scholars and our students have been consistently receiving the St. Andrew's Scholarship to Scotland. These types of honors reflect well on the college's entire curriculum."

Grace M. Fala
Assistant Professor of Speech Communication

"Dr. Neff is a man who truly cared about Juniata; one who strengthened the heart of our community in meaningful and memorable ways. His individual spirit is steady enough to challenge, warm enough to trust, and strong enough to persevere.

"I'll never forget my first Madrigal Dinner. After serving the students, we headed to the Neff's for 'the spread.' The spread already had a reputation of its own. Regarding food and drinks, I knew what to expect. With regard to hospitality however, I was quite the newcomer. You can imagine my response when Dr. Neff asked if I would play guitar for his guests. The guitar was in the back seat of my car. It was drizzling thin ice that night, so I made an attempt to blame the weather. It would be too cold for the guitar. Dr. Neff must have sensed my vulnerability. He grabbed an umbrella from his closet and asked for my keys. I stood on the patio watching in amazement as he steadied each step across the street to retrieve my guitar.

"My father died when I was in my early twenties, at a time when I played guitar a lot. Music paid college tuition. I often wonder if Dr. Neff knew how much he retrieved that night when he brought my guitar into his home. In a simple, unexpected moment, I was deeply moved by the warmth and kindness of the one who presides."

Andrew M. Murray
Professor of Peace &
Conflict Studies
Director of Baker Institute for Peace and Conflict Studies

"The emotional and spiritual support that he has given to the development of the peace and conflict studies program has been instrumental to the success of the program."

Paul D. Schettler, Jr.
Jacob H. & Rachel Brumbaugh Professor of Chemistry

"He is a wonderful human being who exemplifies what a Juniata education ought to be. He should be remembered for his caring stewardship."

Fay I. Glosenger
Martin G. Brumbaugh
Professor of Education
Chair, Education Department

"He's been a good neighbor, friend, and leader. He's been very supportive of the education department throughout his tenure as president."

THE PRESIDENTIAL GALA

A Musical Farewell

Juniata College said good-bye to outgoing President Robert Neff with a musical tribute that included a commissioned work by Paul Halley, keyboardist and composer for the Paul Winter Consort.

Robert W. Neff narrated Aaron Copland's Lincoln Portrait at the Presidential Gala.

The choral and orchestral piece by Halley was based on a 1513 letter from Brother Giovanni Giocondo, who tells some unknown young protégé or student, "Life is so generous a giver... Welcome it, grasp it, and you touch the Angel's hand that brings it to you."

Dr. Neff has welcomed and grasped life, conducting a spark of the angelic to the college during his 12-year tenure, according to participants in the Presidential Gala, which included a post-concert reception.

"He's a passionate man with a big soul," said college wind orchestra conductor Diane Bargiel, whom Dr. Neff helped lure to the college three years ago to tone up the Juniata music program.

"Though the college offers no music major course of study, Dr. Neff insisted that students should have the opportunity to perform and appreciate musical quality," Bargiel said.

"He wanted music to be a moving experience," said Bargiel, who showed her own insistence on quality by keeping Dr. Neff and the orchestra after the concert to redo Aaron Copland's Lincoln Portrait, which Dr. Neff narrated — to insure it would sound right on the concert tape.

"He (Dr. Neff) has a tremendous heart for Juniata," said Lea Sunderland, wife of Klare Sunderland, former chairman of the college's board of directors. "He's passionate about every achievement at the college, including those of sports teams," she said.

"Dr. Neff is a "people person" who struck the right chord on the first measure 12 years ago when he brought coffee and doughnuts from an introductory breakfast in his honor to maintenance workers in another area of the campus," Klare Sunderland said.

Dr. Neff has been able to smooth out dissonance along the way.

In recent years, Juniata, like other colleges, worried about attracting enough students and about keeping costs on a reasonable scale.

"But under Dr. Neff's guidance, enrollment has stabilized, while tuition hikes have been a manageable 3 percent per year over the last few years," Sunderland indicated.

Dr. Neff hasn't sidestepped the tough decisions, either, according to Sunderland, who recalled a modest downsizing of faculty several years ago to free funds for bringing the rest of the faculty's pay up to national standards.

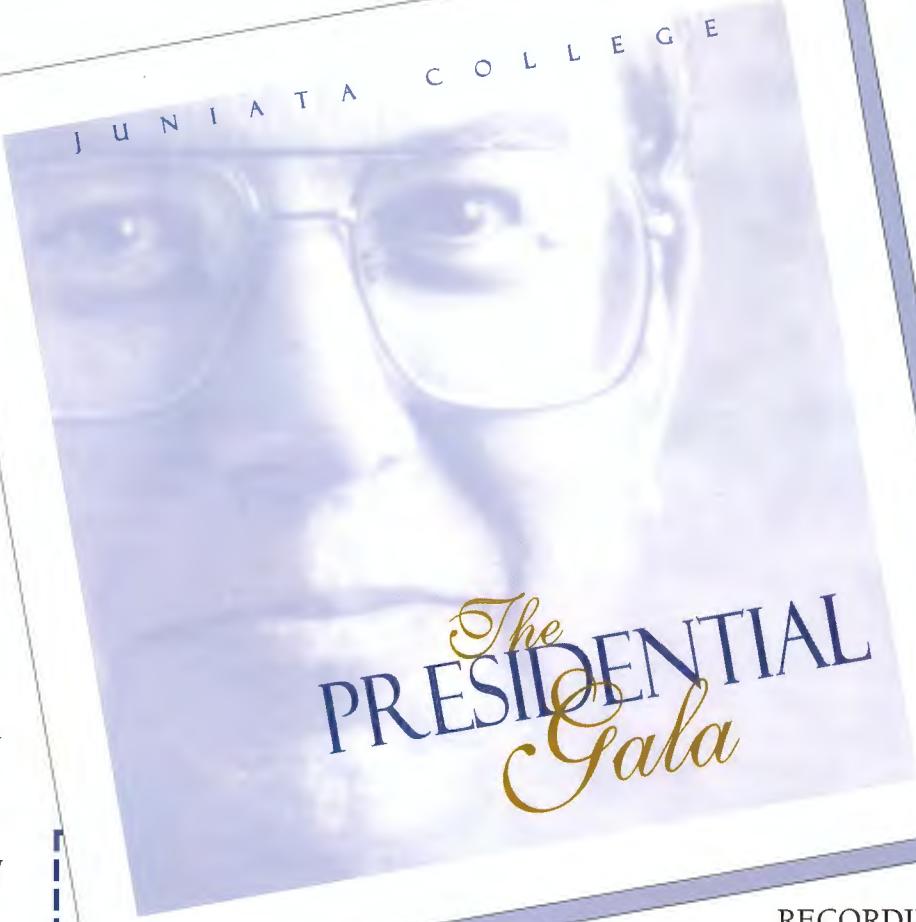

"Overall, Dr. Neff leaves the college in the best fiscal shape in its history," Sunderland said.

"He kept his word about remaining during Sunderland's stint as chairman, which ended two years ago," Sunderland said. "The transition to incoming president Thomas Kepple, who takes over July 1, should be easy because Dr. Neff has given the college plenty of time to prepare," he said.

"Juniata will own the rights to the Halley composition — A Letter from Giocondo — for a year, after which it will be in the public domain," said Halley, who plans to publish the piece.

"Halley, a native of England, thought the Giocondo letter would be harmonious with the presidential gala after hearing an actor friend recite text," he said. "Dr. Neff has a penchant for things Italian and the letter seems fitting for a community leader's farewell to his people," Halley said.

Savannah Schroll is centered among her friends and roommates, Ethel, Rachel, Julie and Rebekha. They just enjoyed lunch together at a restaurant in Lübeck, Germany.

Munich, a neoclassical capital of German metropolitan life and fashion, has become home to one of Juniata College's first Fulbright Scholars. Savannah Schroll, a 1997 graduate, has strolled past the cathedrals and palaces that stand as historic landmarks throughout the city. She has frequented the world-renowned opera houses and theaters emblematic of high society entertainment. She has danced the night away at upscale modern discotheques favored by German yuppies.

And she has seen her share of art – avant-garde, expressionist, impressionist, baroque, rococo, and art nouveau – distinctions which are best deciphered by a Fulbright art scholar like Ms. Schroll.

With a bachelor's degree in art/German, Ms. Schroll of York, Pa. was awarded the Fulbright Scholarship in her senior year at Juniata. The United States Congress created the Fulbright Program in 1946, immediately after World War II, to foster mutual understanding among nations through educational and cultural exchanges.

Today the Fulbright Program is the U.S. Government's premier scholarship program. Each year the program allows Americans to study or conduct research in over 100 nations. The U.S. Student Program is designed to give recent college graduates, master's and doctoral candidates, and young professionals and artists opportunities for personal development and international experience. The program promotes cultural awareness and mutual understanding through personal interactions.

Since last August, Ms. Schroll has visited various German cities and sites while researching and studying the arts. Painting and sculpture, music and theater, stage design and architecture, language and literature have all had their share of Ms. Schroll's attention during her yearlong Fulbright stay in Germany, which concludes in July. She has also gained a wealth of cultural awareness and appreciation.

"This experience has been magnificent for me. It has given me the opportunity to experience so much about German life and culture," Ms. Schroll said via telephone at the conclusion of a recent workday at Neue Pinakothek, an art museum where she is serving her internship. "My experience here has really galvanized what I want to do. My goal is to someday be a museum curator. That will be a challenge, but my experience here will be a real benefit for me in my attempt to reach that goal."

Ms. Schroll began her Fulbright study with a month-long stay with a host family in Kiel in northern Germany. In addition to her course work there, she learned about German culture and became more fluent in the German language. She studied at Ludwig-Maximilian Universitaet in Munich – an ideal setting for an art student.

Munich is a city rich in art. Its collection of art in numerous galleries throughout the city includes many of the most respected works in the world. Ms. Schroll serves her internship at the Neue Pinakothek, where she catalogues the art work and retraces its history.

The Neue Pinakothek, or New Picture Gallery, houses a collection of sculptures and paintings from many highly-regarded 19th century artists. The works range in style from rococo to art nouveau – that is, from an elaborate, decorative, ornate, 18th-century style of art to the ensuing more streamlined "new era" of art. The collection includes an impressive number of famous 19th-century works by Manet, Monet, Degas and Cezanne.

Directly opposite the Neue Pinakothek is the Alte Pinakothek, or Old Picture Gallery. Modeled after Renaissance palaces in Venice, it was the largest gallery when built in the 1800s. It houses a collection of works by Old German and Flemish Masters.

"The breadth of art that I have been able to see and study has been extraordinary," Ms. Schroll said.

Ms. Schroll credits her preparation for the Fulbright experience to Juniata's art department, which may be small in size but is far-reaching in scope. She is particularly grateful to Karen Rosell, professor of art and chairperson of Juniata's art department.

"Karen is a great resource of knowledge to draw from.

She's the reason that I'm here in the first place, and she continues to be a great ally," Ms. Schroll said. "Her effort goes beyond the classroom. And in the classroom, she prepared me very well for this experience. Her teaching style is a forum to express and articulate ideas, and it's essential to express yourself here. I owe a great debt of gratitude to Karen."

Karen Rosell, professor of art and art department chair

Political Science Professors Earn Fulbright Honors

Two Juniata College faculty members in the politics department received Fulbright Scholarships this spring. J. Jackson Barlow, associate professor of politics and chair of the politics department, and Emil Nagengast, assistant professor of political science, received their prestigious honors within weeks of each other.

J. Jackson Barlow,
associate professor of
politics and politics
department chair

Emil Nagengast,
assistant professor of
political science

As Fulbright Scholars, Drs. Barlow and Nagengast join the ranks of distinguished scholars and professionals worldwide who are leaders in the educational, political, economic, social, and cultural lives of their countries. For over 50 years, the Fulbright Program has offered faculty, students, and professionals from around the country the opportunity to conduct research, teach, or study abroad and to make a major contribution to global understanding.

"This is a great honor, and it demonstrates the kind of place Juniata is to have two faculty members selected," Dr. Barlow said.

Dr. Nagengast was selected to participate in a German Studies Seminar. The three-week summer session began in Bonn and included stays in Berlin, Leipzig, and Dresden with excursions to Frankfurt, Halle, and Prague.

"This scholarship opportunity was so important to me because of the timing of several ventures," Dr. Nagengast said. "This will be an opportunity to strengthen our European studies program at Juniata and hopefully add internships for Juniata students. It was also crucial to me because it enables me to do research for a book I am writing on Germany.

The research this summer fit in perfectly with what I needed to do in terms of making contacts both with American scholars and with German politicians and scholars."

The broad focus of the interdisciplinary Fulbright seminar was on the current German culture and society. The specialized focus was on Germany's relations with neighboring countries. Discussions centered on Germany's current role in European politics, in particular, its relations with Poland and the Czech Republic. German political and business leaders provided insight.

Dr. Barlow was selected for a Fulbright Scholar award in the Czech Republic for the 1998-99 academic year. His yearlong teaching sabbatical at Masaryk University and Technical University, two universities in the city of Brno, begins in September 1998 and continues through June 1999.

"Certainly, I will bring back a much deeper perspective on democracy," Dr. Barlow said. "I will get into issues of comparative democracy, and I will also bring something back in terms of our core curriculum in cultural analysis. They are interested in knowing how Americans learn to participate in politics; how they can learn their responsibilities and the rights of citizenship; and how to acquire a democratic outlook."

JOHN W. SWIGART '61 Retires From Post At Swigart Associates, Inc.

John W. Swigart Jr. '61 retired from his position as chairman of the board of Swigart Associates, Inc. on May 29, 1998 after having worked for the company and its affiliates for 37 years.

Swigart continued to maintain the close association between the family-run company and Juniata College throughout his tenure at Swigart Associates, Inc.

In recent years, Swigart has served on the Trustees Council at Juniata.

"I'm part of the family's fourth generation of Juniatiens, but the company's interest in Juniata goes beyond the family being alumni," Swigart said. "Through the generations, we recognized the contribution that Juniata makes to the Huntingdon community. A lot of things that happen here happen because it is a college town. The college brings something that no other business or company brings. There's been a long-standing feeling at the company that we want to support a scholarship relationship with Juniata, and I think the company would like to continue that if it would help students who need it financially."

After graduating from Juniata with a B.S. degree in economics, Swigart joined the company in September 1961 as an automobile physical damage claims adjuster.

Eventually working his way to vice president and then senior vice president, in 1986 Swigart was elected president of Mutual Benefit and senior vice president and chief operating officer of Swigart Associates. In 1994, he was named president of Swigart Associates, in which capacity he worked until March 1997, when he assumed his position as chairman of the board.

Involved in a number of civic organizations, Swigart is currently a member of Huntingdon County Business and Industry, and in the 1970s and '80s, he held a variety of positions with its predecessor, Huntingdon Business and Industry, including serving as its president in 1980-81. He has worked on various projects for the Southern Alleghenies Planning and Development Commission. He is currently a director of the Huntingdon Park and Road Association. He has been a member of the Huntingdon Rotary Club since 1963, and he also belongs to the Stone Church of the Brethren.

In his retirement, Swigart plans to pursue his interests in photography, hunting, Ferrari Club of America events, and history of the American West. He and his wife, Martha, look forward to continuing their travels in the West, particularly to the Rocky Mountain states.

Under Scrutiny, Juniata's International Programs Take Flight During President Neff's Tenure

"Juniata College has a long-standing belief that students should be sensitive participants in the larger world of which they are a part."

—added to the college mission statement Fall 1993 working with the likes of the American head of Panasonic. You name the company and we were involved in it."

While Juniata is somewhat more isolated than Ramapo, the strategy for internationalization from an institutional standpoint remains the same.

"The most urgent need I saw when I arrived at Juniata in 1994 was to bring the student life office into the international programs picture," Hatala said. "They were conspicuous in their absence from that 'all-college committee' for internationalization. That included not only academic representatives, but enrollment and a number of other people as well, all of whom Midway through the 12-year presidency of Robert W. Neff at Juniata, the college received a blistering critique from an independent counsel which challenged its commitment to the international programs office (IPO).

The strength of Juniata's international programs upon Dr. Neff's retirement in June 1998 is evidence of the enormous changes that unfolded in the final years of his presidency. Through a sequence of decisions, hirings, and events — and, ultimately, a newfound commitment to internationalization — the college has transformed its international programs.

"After reading the report (which criticized the college's commitment to its international programs), the president formed a task force on internationalization, and what that task force did, with presidential approval, was to create a strategic plan for internationalization," said David Sowell, IPO director. "Out of that came a multifaceted approach to internationalization, and that really set up the direction in which we're going."

Juniata affirmed its commitment to internationalization in the fall of 1993 through the following insertion into the college mission statement: "Juniata College has a long-standing belief that students should be sensitive participants in the larger world of which they are a part."

A series of hirings sparked further internationalization. Dr. Neff hired Donald D. Moyer as vice president for advancement and marketing and Robert J. Hatala as provost. Hatala, a 1952 Juniata graduate, returned to his alma mater after putting Ramapo College in Mahwah, N.J. on the map of the international scene. As vice president for academic affairs, Hatala was pivotal in building Ramapo's international reputation, which became such an identified and recognized hallmark that it coined the slogan, "The college for a global education."

"Bob Hatala was a major international player at Ramapo, and he came in to his position here with an international agenda," Sowell said.

The major difference between Hatala's role in internationalizing Ramapo and internationalizing Juniata was location: "Bear in mind that Ramapo is located in northern New Jersey," he said, "so you can spit in any direction of the compass and you're going to hit 300 international company headquarters. I found myself needed to be there to have a total institutional commitment to internationalization."

The interest in recruiting more international students demands that accommodations be made on campus to make their lives enjoyable. That includes campus activities for international students as well as holding events recognizing international customs, culture, and holidays. It demands international cuisine. It demands establishing a course in English to assist international students with their English language skills. It demands legal considerations for everything from travel passports to health insurance. It demands implementing international aspects into every academic department and in the curriculum.

"In addition, colleges need to think about ways to utilize international students in the curriculum and in student life, as well as our own returning students who have studied abroad," Hatala said. "The questions have to be asked, 'How can we take advantage of the cultural background that each of our international students brings to this campus? How can we take advantage of the experience that each of our own students brings back after they've studied abroad for a semester or a year?'

Juniata's study abroad program is unique in that it features two diametrically different types of experiences for students. The student exchange program involves one student from Juniata exchanging places with another student from any of a number of international colleges and universities on a one-for-one basis. This program is designed for students seeking an independent type of experience. Students who prefer a more supportive type of program can choose to participate in Juniata's Brethren Colleges Abroad (BCA) program in which they arrive at an international college or university as part of a group of BCA students and there is a BCA representative on the international campus to assist that group of students.

"Having both these different types of study abroad programs — the student exchange and the conventional study abroad as part of a group — is very unusual," Hatala said, "and Juniata students thrive abroad because of the preparation they get here on campus."

Juniata College Museum Of Art

Acquires The Worth B. Stottlemeyer Collection

Juniata College acquired a private art collection that includes significant works from renowned American and European artists from the 17th through the 20th centuries. Quayton R. Stottlemeyer, a 1951 Juniata graduate, inherited the impressive art collection from his father, Worth B. Stottlemeyer. He donated the works to the college during private official document signing ceremonies in the office of Robert W. Neff on Tuesday, April 7, 1998.

A lecture designed to introduce the college and community to the Worth B. Stottlemeyer Collection of art was presented on Tuesday, April 7 in the Shoemaker Gallery at Juniata's Carnegie Hall. Nancy Siegel, curator of the Juniata College Museum of Art, discussed the history of the collection and how it came to Juniata College in her presentation titled "In Miniature: Selections from the Worth B. Stottlemeyer Collection." She highlighted important works from the collection including paintings, prints and portrait miniatures. Selected pieces from the collection were on display at the lecture.

The Worth B. Stottlemeyer Collection consists of over 300 paintings, prints, drawings, and portrait miniatures. Notable examples of the paintings include significant landscapes and seascapes attributed to Asher B. Durand, John W. Casilear, Jervis McEntee, Thomas and Edward Moran, Andrew Melrose, George Inness, Arthur F. Tait, and Ralph Blakelock with British and American portraits attributed to Sir Joshua Reynolds, Sir Thomas Lawrence, Jane Stuart, Samuel Morse, Anna Peale, and William Sydney Mount. Works by European artists include paintings attributed to Gerard Dou, Adriaen Brouwer, and Sebastiano Conca. In addition to the larger paintings, the collection includes over 70 portrait miniatures from the 18th and 19th centuries. Among the prints and drawings are works attributed to Rembrandt, Turner, Whistler, and selections from Hiroshige's Fifty-Three Stages of the Tokaido.

"We are truly grateful to Quayton Stottlemeyer for this magnificent donation," said Robert W. Neff, president of Juniata College. "The acquisition of the Worth B. Stottlemeyer Collection is a major step forward for the arts at Juniata College. These works will be the showcase of our impressive and ever-expanding works in the Juniata College Museum of Art."

Phillip J. Earenfight, director of the Juniata College Museum of Art, added that, "Recovering such a significant collection of works - many of which have never been documented or seen in public - represents an important opportunity for the students of Juniata College to work with primary material. The Worth B. Stottlemeyer Collection will dramatically enhance the college's museum studies program."

The collection will serve as the foundation for a permanent collection of fine art at Juniata College and will complement existing pieces that the college currently owns. The Juniata College Museum of Art will catalogue, publish, and exhibit the works in the Worth B. Stottlemeyer Collection to promote the study, interpretation, and appreciation of the visual arts. In addition to showcasing representative painting styles from artists spanning the 17th through 20th centuries, the collection also provides insight into early 20th century patterns in collecting.

"Juniata College is a nearly ideal institution with which the collection can have a symbiotic relationship," Quayton R. Stottlemeyer said. "I believe the college can use the collection for educational purposes, helping students and me to develop standards of critical artistic judgment, taste, understanding, and appreciation. I believe the college can and will display the best portion of the collection for an increasing number of outside viewers to appreciate, as my father and the artists involved would have desired."

David Reingold, professor of chemistry, attended the Gordon Conference on Innovations in College Chemistry Teaching in Ventura, Calif., January 3-8. His presentation titled "Bioorganic First at Juniata College" explained our unique chemistry curriculum.

David Reingold

Norm Siems, professor of physics, attended the winter meeting of the American Association of Physics Teachers which was held in New Orleans, January 3-8. He chaired the opening session on Evaluation of Teaching Methods (and claimed, during his introduction, full credit to Juniata College for the achievements of Nobel Laureate Bill Phillips '70!). As Section Representative of the Central PA Section of AAPT, he participated in an Officer's Exchange meeting and the national organization's Council meeting as well as a meeting of section representatives from across the country.

A group of Juniata students, faculty and their spouses were invited to attend a presentation by Juniata's Nobel Prize-winning graduate Bill Phillips '70. The sold-out event was held Saturday, January 24 at the National Institute of Standards and Technology in Gaithersburg, Maryland. Dr. Phillips recognized Juniata's physics department before the large audience that was packed into the auditorium. In attendance from Juniata were Norm Siems, Wilfred Norris, Alice Churukian, Ei-Ichiro and Katsuko Ochiai, Earl and Harriet Kaylor, Betty Ann Cherry, and Ray Pfrogner, along with students Dan Savino '00 and Adam Nagy '00.

Ei Ichiro, professor of chemistry, had an article "Improving Science Education - An American Experience" published in Kagaku (Science, Tokyo), vol. 68, p 210-212 (1998).

Emil Nagengast, assistant professor of political science, has been selected as a participant in the 1998 Fulbright German Studies Seminar "Deutschland und Mitteleuropa." This seminar will take place in June and July in Bonn, Berlin, Dresden and Prague.

Emil had his article "Germany's Troublesome Devotion to National Self-Determination" accepted for publication in the June 1998 special issue of the journal Peace Review.

Doug Glazier, professor of biology, has contributed a chapter to a recently published book Studies in Crenobiology: The Biology of Springs and Springbrooks. The chapter, titled "Springs as model systems for ecology and evolutionary biology: a case study of Gammarus minus Say (Amphipoda) in mid-Appalachian springs differing in pH and ionic content," summarizes research involving eleven Juniata College students during 1990 to 1995.

Doug's module in the chemistry-biology laboratory course, titled "Ecology, evolution and classification of life in a freshwater spring" has also recently been selected as one of ten research-based labs to be included in the Research Link 2000 Project, sponsored by the National Science Foundation and the Council on Undergraduate Research. The purpose of the project is to "bring together biology faculty from colleges and universities to select, develop and disseminate a group of field-tested, experimental systems and instructional materials that will support the introduction of research-based experiments in introductory biology courses, and to promote research activities by students and faculty on all levels of the undergraduate curriculum."

Doug will be taking part in two workshops during the next two summers to develop his lab for use in undergraduate biology curricula nationwide.

Another goal of the workshops will be to set up internet links so that students at Juniata and other colleges and universities will be able to share data resulting from their participation in Doug's lab and those of other workshop participants.

Diane Bargiel

David Sowell, director of international programs, has had several articles published recently including "Repertoires of Contention in Urban Colombia, 1760s - 1940s: A Preliminary Inquiry into Latin American Social Violence," Journal of Urban History, guest editors, Diego Armus and John Lear 24:3 (March 1998), 302-336. His article "Miquel Perdomo Neira: Healing, Culture, and Power in the Nineteenth-Century Andes," was published in Anuario Colombiano de Historia Social y de la Cultura, No. 24 91997), 167-188 and the article "Political Impulses: Popular Participation in Formal and Informal Politics, Bogotá, Colombia, 1870-1930," was published in The Condition of the City, ed. by Ronn F. Pineo and James Baer (San Francisco: Westview Press, 1998, 1-29).

Donald Durnbaugh, college archivist, was honored by a special issue of a German quarterly journal. The publication Wittgenstein dedicated its December 1997 issue to Durnbaugh in recognition of his scholarly study of Radical Pietism and the history of the Brethren movement. Schwarzenau, the German village where the Brethren began, is located in the former principality of Wittgenstein, now part of the state of North Rhine Westphalia.

Diane Bargiel, assistant professor of music, recently attended the combined College Band Directors National Association Eastern Regional Conference & the Pennsylvania Collegiate Bandmasters Association Conferences held at the Pennsylvania State University. The latter included the 51st Annual Pennsylvania Intercollegiate Band in which seniors Gabe Gamber '98 and Amanda Grannas '98 took part. On March 3, Bargiel adjudicated the concerto competition of "Ovations," the Ohio Valley Youth Orchestra in Wheeling, West Virginia and on March 6-7 she guest conducted the Perry County Band.

Grace Fala

In January, Grace Fala, assistant professor of communication, was invited to facilitate a workshop on Communicating Respect: Building Understanding of Multiculturalism and Cultural Diversity at the State College Area School District Staff Development Day. In February, she facilitated a workshop on “Language and Empowerment” for the Aim High Leadership Conference at Penn State University. In March, she was invited as keynote facilitator of two workshops at the “Diversity Within” Seminar at Shippensburg University. In April, Grace conducted another workshop on campus in “Language and Empowerment” for Soar: Leadership for High School Ladies.

During spring break, Jack Troy assistant professor of art, taught workshops at Mt. Hood Community College in Gresham, Oregon, and at the University of Oregon, Eugene. He fired an anagama kiln at the studio of Hiroshi Ogawa in Elkton, Oregon, with 16 potters from Oregon, Washington, California, and Colorado. He has had a piece of work accepted for the international exhibition of ceramics known as the Fletcher Challenge in Auckland, New Zealand. His work is also on display at the Dallas Museum of Art; Crossman Gallery of the University of Wisconsin, Whitewater; and the Appalachian Center for Crafts, Smithville, Tenn. Troy has been invited to award prizes for entries in the “Ceramics U.S.A.” exhibition at North Texas State University, Denton, Texas, where he will also present a workshop for potters at NTSU.

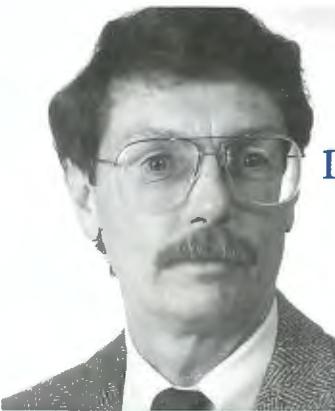

Manel Lacorte, instructor in Spanish, organized the Círculo de Amigos del Español, a group of secondary school Spanish teachers and students with interest in teaching Spanish. The purpose is to share experiences and ideas concerning the teaching of Spanish language and culture. The first meeting took place at Juniata College in March and the subject was “Vocabulary Games”. The group will meet periodically in different locations within the area.

He authored the article “To Code or Not To Code” with Brian Parkinson, Parveen Sandhu, and Lesley Gourlay. It will be published in EWPAL (Edinburgh Working Papers in Applied Linguistics) in December 1998.

Manel also coauthored the article “Hispanos y Medios de Comunicación en Estados Unidos: Un Análisis Crítico” (“Portrayal of Hispanics in American Main Stream Media”) with Kelly Morton '98. It will be published by Cuadernos Cervantes de la Lengua Española (Spain) in May 1998.

JUNIATA NAMES

DR. DAVID R. DREWS

DANA PROFESSOR OF PSYCHOLOGY

President Robert W. Neff has named Dr. David R. Drews, professor of psychology, as the college's newest Charles A. Dana Professor. Dr. Drews, who has been a member of the Juniata faculty since 1969, will be the Charles A. Dana Professor of Psychology.

The Charles A. Dana Professorship program was developed by the Dana Foundation to assist selected colleges in attracting and holding faculty members of outstanding ability and scholarly attributes. Juniata received the support of the Dana Foundation in 1970 to establish the supported professorships.

Dr. Drews joins four Juniata faculty in Dana supported positions. Dr. Ronald L. Cherry, the Dana Supported Professor of Economics; Dr. Linda Sue Esch, the Dana Supported Professor of Mathematics; Dr. Klaus P. Kipphan, the Dana Supported Professor of History; and Dr. William E. Russey, the Dana Supported Professor of Chemistry represent 127 years of dedicated teaching and scholarly activity on campus.

The Dana Foundation provided a gift of $250,000, which was matched by the college, to set up the initial supported professorship opportunities. Interest from the $2.7 million endowment is used to supplement the compensation of the professors. Juniata was the fifteenth college in the nation to receive Dana Professorship support.

Dr. Drews received his bachelor of arts degree in 1965 from Denison University. He subsequently received his master's degree (1968) and Ph.D. (1970) from the University of Delaware. Dr. Drews has taught courses in learning and conditioning, memory, motivation, statistics, and research design at Juniata. Most recently he has developed an applied psychology course related to Juniata's Peace and Conflict Studies program with a MacArthur Foundation Grant received in 1989-90. He was awarded the Beachley Distinguished Professor Award for Outstanding Teaching in 1989.

Throughout his teaching career, he has authored and coauthored numerous papers and articles presented to such organizations as the Peace Studies Association, Eastern Psychological Association and the American Psychological Association, and is published in such journals as The Journal of Experimental Social Psychology, The Journal of Social Behavior and Personality, Teaching of Psychology, and Cross-Cultural Research.

From Start To Finish

Athletics were always a priority during the Neff era

When President Robert Neff arrived on the Juniata College campus for the start of the 1986-87 school year, one thing about the institution's athletic department stood out in his mind. Things were moving in the right direction but there was a sense of incompleteness in the air. Juniata had a "brand new" facility in the Kennedy Sports+Recreation Center which was completed in 1983, thanks to the efforts of Neff's predecessor, Fred Binder, and his administration, but there was more that needed to be done with it. In addition, the blue and gold athletic department was small, but there was potential for growth.

With Robert W. Neff's departure on June 30, 1998, the Juniata College athletic program can look back at a time period when it saw a "coming together" of both facilities and staff. The union has led to increased success across the board and has capped off the tenure of a president who supported athletics from wire to wire.

"I think that one of the things that Fred (Binder) did was get things started for us," lot of money, there were things that needed attention and it was very important to get the projects completed."

In the 12 years of his presidency, the Juniata campus has seen dramatic changes in its indoor and outdoor facilities, including the completion of Knox Stadium, the resurfacing of the track, the new lighting and banners in Memorial Gymnasium and the improvement in the tennis courts and playing fields. The creation of the Sports Hall of Fame and the athletic awards banquet have also been important. Without a doubt though, the two additions at the top of the list are the $300,000 Sam and Martha Brumbaugh Strength and Fitness Center and the growth of the athletic department staff.

"The fitness center is obviously a huge addition to the athletic program as well as the entire college community," commented Neff. "In this day and age everyone is concerned about being physically fit and our dynamic fitness center is an example of Juniata's commitment to athletics and personal health."

The athletic department has nearly doubled in full-time staff members and, as a result, there is more of a wholeness among the group.

"I feel that our coaches are more united than they have ever been and they are working hard for the good of the whole department not just their individual sports," Neff said. "I wish that I was going to be here at Juniata for three more years, because I truly feel that our varsity athletic programs, as a whole, are on the verge of something that will be terrific."

As with any administration, there comes times when you are forced to make tough decisions and when you have to support changes that you hope down the road will be for the good of the institution. In the spring of 1995, Juniata decided to make cuts in the athletic department and, as a result, some sports were dropped. The men's swimming, men's cross country, men's tennis, golf and wrestling squads were discontinued to increase Juniata's commitment to gender equity (bringing into balance athletic opportunities for women in proportion to the student population) and build better overall competitive athletic programs.

"Cutting sports was a difficult decision to make and support," said Neff. "I wished that I didn't have to do it, but it needed to be done and now we are a stronger athletic program with 15 varsity sports instead of 20."

Overall, Neff is pleased with the development of the state of athletics at Juniata during his 12-year reign and feels that continued growth in Juniata athletics is important.

"I feel that school spirit is defined by the quality of the athletic program," said Neff. "I think that Juniata's school spirit is at an all-time high right now. It is going to continue to grow because athletics is such an important part of the collegiate process and is an extension of the classroom for the student-athlete, not just varsity athletes, but club and intramural athletes as well."

"Continued growth in the department of athletics is important for several reasons. It supports the development of the student as a whole, it builds lifelong past times and it creates school spirit and pulls students, faculty, staff and parents together to get excited and support a common cause."

"In this day and age everyone is concerned about being physically fit and our dynamic fitness center is an example of Juniata's commitment to athletics and personal health."—Dr. Robert Neff said Neff. "He was able to have the Sports+Rec Center built and that was a huge step. The problem was that the budget was so narrow it was like we created a barn without anything in it. So the first fund-raising project that I was involved in was a million dollars for athletics and I felt that, even though it was a

The Juniata College varsity athletic programs supplied President Robert Neff, a regular at many Eagle contests, with many memorable moments during his tenure, but the night of March 24, 1998, will forever be cherished.

The blue and gold men's volleyball team played host to Division I rival Penn State in front of plenty of rowdy Juniata fans. When the dust had settled following the 2 1/2 hour match, the Nittany Lions had escaped with a narrow, 3-2 (15-2, 5-15, 16-17, 15-5, 15-11) triumph. Juniata was down, 10-3, in the third game but refused to give in to the Division I program and pulled out a 17-16 win.

"That match represented what Juniata has become over the years in all of its sports," said Neff. "Juniata refuses to back down and battles hard from start to finish. What was equally impressive was the atmosphere in the gym. Our fans were very supportive of our athletes and they did it in a tasteful way. That's school spirit."

Just as important that night was the recognition (in between the second and third games of the match) of the 1997 Juniata women's volleyball team and the three Eagle wrestlers who competed at the National Collegiate Wrestling Association (NCWA) championship in Dallas, Texas, for non-varsity programs.

Junior 134-pound entry Rich Shoemaker and junior Jason Biringer, at 167 pounds, won national championships, while unlimited weight-class entry Chad Carter also advanced out of the regionals to make the national appearance.

The Juniata women's volleyball team, which finished as the NCAA Division III runner-up for the second straight year, posted a combined record of 86-3 over the past two seasons.

"The women's volleyball program at Juniata will always be special to me and that night we were able to recognize one of the greatest teams in College Hill history and that was special," said Neff.

"I had made a promise to the women's volleyball team that if they won the national championship I would dye my hair," stated Neff. "Although they did not win it all, I dyed my hair that evening to show my overwhelming support of Juniata College athletics that night and for always."

25-YEAR ANNIVERSARY OF THE STAGG BOWL FOOTBALL TEAM AND INDUCTION OF 10 NEW SPORTS HALL OF FAMERS HIGHLIGHT OCTOBER 16-17 WEEKEND

The weekend of October 16-17, 1998, will be a busy one on College Hill as Juniata celebrates the 25th anniversary of the school's appearance in the Amos Alonzo Stagg Bowl – the first NCAA Division III national football championship game. Coach Walt Nadzak's 1973 squad upset Bridgeport 35-14 in the Eastern title contest before falling to Wittenberg, 41-0 in the regionally televised bowl game at Phenix City, Alabama.

There is a full schedule of activities for Friday and Saturday (see below). The record-setting squad will be officially recognized as part of a special J-Club Luncheon at 11:30 a.m. on Oct. 17, and then during halftime of the Lebanon Valley-Juniata football game at Knox Stadium that afternoon. Details on registration for the events will be announced this summer by the J-Club and the Alumni Office. For more information, please call the Alumni Office at 800-570-9791.

The fourth annual Juniata Sports Hall of Fame Day is also set for Saturday, October 17, beginning with the J-Club Luncheon. The Hall of Fame reception and dinner will be held Saturday evening with the official induction ceremony taking place as part of the dinner program.

The Juniata Sports Hall of Fame Class of '98 includes: George Weaver '38, Bill Germann '49, Aldo Bonomi '50, John Staley '57, Bob Waggoner '73, Lou Eckerl '74, Stu Jackson '77, Beth (Hoppel) Barnett '88, Cathy (Miller) Gilkey '88, Susan Grubb '88 and Nancy (Harden) Latimore.

An Alum Writes . . .

Dear Editor,

I feel compelled to write to share a wonderful experience I had recently.

As an upcoming member of the Alumni Council and a member of the Committee to Improve Alumni/Current Student Relations, this is a great example of doing just that. Actually, it's all Professor Donaldson's fault! There's a project in his Intro to Business class for which the students have to search the ACT database for a name of an alum to call to discuss his/her career. She had a list of questions, although we strayed in a few other directions as well! ... we spoke about a Juniata education and how it relates to current career situations, and she asked for some interviewing suggestions and career advice, etc. It was great to "connect" so immediately with her. I could see that she's excited about being at Juniata and we shared the same perspective of Juniata as a total "experience" rather than just a place to attend classes.

This is a great project. It's simple, straight-to-the-source research because it's a phone call. But it will result in real-life examples that may not otherwise be accessible to these students. Also, it forces the current students to be aware of and use the ACT database, and in the right combination of student and alumni, a great conversation can result.

I'm sure that there are students and alums who for some reason - time constraints, etc., couldn't "chat" as much as we did, but hopefully, there were some other people, as well, who had a warm and fuzzy "I love Juniata" feeling when they hung up the phone.

1998-99 JC NEWS Clip Book

In the course of the last year, Juniata College, its alumni, faculty, students, and staff have made headlines across the country and around the world. From a Nobel Prize to a Presidential Medal of Freedom to Fulbright and Goldwater Scholars, Juniata has made news.

For the 1998-99 school year, the Juniata media relations office plans to track the coverage that the college receives, AND YOU CAN HELP!

If your local newspaper, radio and television stations outside the Huntingdon/Blair Counties area report news on Juniata or any of its alumni, faculty, students, and staff, please notify our office at 814-641-3132 or, better yet, send us a copy of the news at: External Relations Office, "Juniata In The News," 1700 Moore Street, Huntingdon, PA 16652.

At the conclusion of the school year we will compile a collection of the news that Juniata and its colleagues make in the form of a "1998-99 News Clips Book." We thank you for being a contributor to this effort.

ON THE ROAD WITH THE ALUMNI

JC's Central Florida Alumni Association Annual Meeting • Sebring, Florida • February 7, 1998

Celebrating their 50th annual meeting, over thirty-five alumni and friends met for fellowship and information-sharing. Dr. Paul M. Robinson '35, in introducing Dr. Neff as speaker, gave a glowing recital of his colorful career as teacher in college and seminary, as general secretary of the Church of the Brethren, as a renowned religion writer, and as president of Juniata College.

Dr. Robinson, president of the association, and John T. Fike '35, secretary-treasurer, were re-elected to another year's term in their respective offices. In attendance was Harold B. Brumbaugh '33, former alumni secretary, who has attended almost all 50 annual meetings. A special thanks to all who helped prepare for this wonderful event.

Dinner in Tampa, Florida • February 10, 1998

A first-time event, a handful of Tampa area Juniatians gathered together for dinner at the Rusty Pelican. They enjoyed a spectacular view of the sun setting over Tampa Bay as well as acquainting themselves with fellow Tampa Juniata alums. Others in the Tampa area should plan to attend next year. Thanks to Ethel D. Hammer '70 and J. Michael Stott '89 for their assistance in organizing this event.

The Neffs enjoying their seafood dinner complete with terrific lobster bibs.

Southern Florida Gathering • Ft. Lauderdale, Florida • February 13, 1998

A dozen Juniata alumni and friends met at the Fort Lauderdale Country Club. An abundance of quality socializing and eating occurred. The Club featured a delicious seafood buffet. Special thanks to David A. Bayer '53 for organizing this event.

wide commitment to internationalization, there had to be support from all quarters, and there was support from the administrative segment of the college.

"Don Moyer was a strong supporter of internationalization, and Don immediately brought in David Hawsey as director of enrollment, and Hawsey was an active supporter of internationalization," Sowell said. "Then you had Kim Richardson, who was the IPO director at that time, and she had just put in the strategic plan for internationalization. So there was a convergence of people and opportunities that laid the framework for what has happened over the last five years. This period has been a critical juncture, and Neff provided the kind of administrative context in which things could happen. He provided administrative support for it. There were a number of instances where he provided that kind of context in which people and actions would move in a direction that he helped to channel. Then he supported those actions and supported them against some internal opposition because of budget concerns."

Among the initiatives taken was the implementation of a program in English as a Second Language (now called Intensive English Program) as a means of attracting more international students to Juniata. In addition, he promoted the development of stronger international components within course offerings. He also supported the internationalization of the curriculum and co-curricular activities at the college.

Dr. Neff was an active proponent of expansion of the BCA into Latin America, a move that has been widely successful in recent years. Juniata's Ecuador program, for example, has been enormously successful since it began just a few years ago.

"There have certainly been some enormous changes in regard to internationalization during Neff's tenure, particularly in the second half of his tenure when he began to support a process, perhaps, having a vision for the institution and realizing where it could lead us," Sowell said.

Words to Live By:

Feisty 92 year-old finds reading group

Khe words of Woodsworth, Kipling and Poe still roll off her tongue with ease.

"Poetry has a way of sticking with you," says 92-year-old Elizabeth Kuehnoel as she teaches a small group of women about duple meters.

Mostly from memory, Kuehnoel recites Edgar Allan Poe's "The Raven."

When she's not teaching poetry, Kuehnoel, who remembers life before the telephone, often sits at her Macintosh, recording a lifetime of memories for her two daughters and grandchildren.

Kuehnoel lives in her own apartment at Lynden Manor Independent Living Retirement facility. Although she'd never admit to it, she spends most mornings reading the Bible to a blind man who lives down the hall. Modest and feisty, Kuehnoel says she simply "keeps busy" during the day.

"I drive my own car. I handle my own finances. I'm the captain of my own ship," she says.

Chuck Lee, administrator at Lynden Manor describes Kuehnoel as a challenge, but in the same breath says she's been a blessing for many who reside at the facility.

Three months ago, Kuehnoel persuaded administrators to establish the Literacy Society, a reading group that meets twice a month to study poetry and literature. Most of the group's member are Lynden Manor residents and range in age from 60 to 100, but the group is open to the public.

"It curdles my milk," Kuehnoel says about older people being treated like preschoolers, only given options of activities like bingo and backgammon.

Older people, just like young people, need to have their minds' challenged to keep them mentally alert. An avid reader, Kuehnoel uses the Literacy Society to increase people's sense of self worth and promote healthy thinking.

"I do it because I like to," Kuehnoel says. "I figured the place needed something. There's a great many people here who's only intention is the next meal."

"Elizabeth is giving us something to broaden our minds," says 60-year-old Elaine Korthius, a temporary resident at Lynden Manor. "She gives us something to do besides just sit here."

Ada DeJong, a 70-year-old Lynden Manor resident who attends the group, says she hadn't read poetry since eighth grade, her last year of formal education.

"She's tops as far as teachers are concerned," DeJong says of Kuehnoel.

Most women didn't have an opportunity to pursue higher education 70 years ago, she explains.

Kuehnoel, however, graduated in 1926 from Juniata College in Pennsylvania, because a high school teacher persuaded her family she was college material.

After earning her bachelor's degree, Kuehnoel taught at a local high school and quickly became head of its English department - until she got married.

"In those days married teachers were not permitted," Kuehnoel says. She and her husband, who died 15 years ago, moved to Seattle, then eventually to Whatcom County, where she has lived for the last 50 years.

Kuehnoel worked as a shoe buyer for Sears and Roebuck and Co., before taking a job in the Burlington-Edison school district.

While there, she taught emotionally disturbed children, ages 14 to 18.

"If there's one thing I'm proud of in my life, it's the years I spent with those children," she says.

"I'm part of a forgotten breed. I'm a dedicated teacher. I would have taught for free I loved it that much."

Teaching literature now provides similar satisfaction, Kuehnoel says.

"The group is very intelligent and receptive," Kuehnoel says.

"They're so appreciative. It makes me feel very humble."

Well-known Juniatians Bill and Jim Berrier '60 served as volunteer co-chairs of a record setting 1997-98 Juniata Fund effort. The twins, joined here by their brother Grey '64, helped the college realize another million dollar year for The Juniata Fund as the college oversubscribed its goal of $1.2 million with more than 4,400 alumni donors participating. The official totals (which were unavailable at press time) will be announced in the next bulletin.

Thank you class fund agents and to everyone who helped to make this year another record year for The Juniata Fund. —Jim & Bill

ERIC D. BIDDLE '82 NAMED ASSISTANT DIRECTOR OF THE JUNIATA FUND

In May, Eric D. Biddle '82, began duties as Assistant Director of The Juniata Fund. Prior to his new position he served as an enrollment manager. Eric joined the professional staff at Juniata in 1988.

In his new position, Eric will assist in developing and executing strategies for achieving the Fund's annual goals. His primary responsibilities include managing the fall and spring telemarketing campaigns, senior class gift activities, and the corporate matching gift program. He will also work closely with regional scholarship initiatives, and parent and reunion special giving.

While a student at Juniata, Eric participated in two varsity sports, football and track, from 1978-82. Among his many athletic accomplishments he led Juniata's football team in receiving in 1980 (22 catches/377 yards) and 1981 (32 catches/645 yards). In addition, Eric was the Middle Atlantic Conference MVP as a senior wide receiver in 1981. He also won the Middle Atlantic Conference Championship in the triple jump in 1981 and 1982. He still holds the Juniata record in the triple jump (48'6").

Eric is married to the former Karen Norton '82 and they have one son, Alex. Eric and Karen have been class fund agents for several years.
